Action In Perception Action In Perception:

Action in Perception Alva Noë, 2006-01-20 Perception is not something that happens to us or in us writes Alva Noë It is something we do In Action in Perception Noë argues that perception and perceptual consciousness depend on capacities for action and thought that perception is a kind of thoughtful activity Touch not vision should be our model for perception Perception is not a process in the brain but a kind of skillful activity of the body as a whole We enact our perceptual experience To perceive according to this enactive approach to perception is not merely to have sensations it is to have sensations that we understand In Action in Perception Noë investigates the forms this understanding can take He begins by arguing on both phenomenological and empirical grounds that the content of perception is not like the content of a picture the world is not given to consciousness all at once but is gained gradually by active inquiry and exploration Noë then argues that perceptual experience acquires content thanks to our possession and exercise of practical bodily knowledge and examines among other topics the problems posed by spatial content and the experience of color He considers the perspectival aspect of the representational content of experience and assesses the place of thought and understanding in experience Finally he explores the implications of the enactive approach for our understanding of the neuroscience of perception

Perception, Action, and Consciousness Nivedita Gangopadhyay, Michael Madary, Finn Spicer, 2010-08-19 What is the relationship between perception and action between an organism and its environment in explaining consciousness This book is an interdisciplinary exploration of the relationship between perception and action with a focus on the debate about the dual visual systems hypothesis against action oriented theories of perception

Variability and Individual Differences in Early Social Perception and Social Cognition Jessica Sommerville, Alia Martin, Talea Ziv, 2016-06-10 Over the past three decades mounting evidence has suggested that infants' social perceptual and social cognitive abilities are considerably richer than was once thought By the end of the second year of life infants discriminate faces along various social dimensions attend to and understand others' goals and intentions use the emotions of others to guide their learning and behavior attribute dispositional characteristics to other agents and make basic social evaluations What has also become clear is that there is a great deal of variability in infants' social perception and cognition A critical outstanding question concerns the nature and meaning of such variability The proposed Research Topic welcomes papers addressing cutting edge questions regarding variability and individual differences in early social perception and social cognition The goal of these papers is to investigate overarching questions in this domain which are necessary to move the field forward Variability in early social perception and social cognition among other domains in infancy and early childhood is often attributed to noise or overlooked in favor of focusing on age related changes Yet recent work suggests that variability in social perceptual and social cognitive tasks reliably inter relates and predicts real world social behaviors For example infants' everyday experience with different face categories predicts individual differences in face processing infants production of goal directed actions predicts their simultaneous understanding of these actions and variability in social attention during the second year of life is related to theory of mind during the preschool years These findings suggest that variability in performance on social perception and social cognition tasks is not merely a nuisance variable but rather may provide the key to addressing significant questions regarding the nature of infants social perception and social cognition and the processes that underlie developmental change Acknowledging and closely examining and investigating variability in early social perceptual and social cognitive abilities may represent a powerful approach for understanding development in at least two ways First variability can signal transitional points in the developmental onset of a given ability Thus such variability and the extent to which variability relates to experience and or other abilities can be used to test hypotheses regarding mechanisms that underlie developmental changes Second variability can represent more enduring individual differences between infants In this case critical questions arise regarding the source of individual differences that is what factors shape the emergence of individual differences and whether such early individual differences contribute to the development of more advanced and sophisticated forms of social cognition and behavior The goal of this Research Topic will be to encourage researchers to take variability in early social perception and cognition seriously Papers that give variability center stage and are aimed at addressing the value of variability for identifying developmental mechanisms as well as investigating the existence source and antecedents of early individual differences in social perception and social cognition are welcomed Taken together the contributed papers will provide integral new information to the study of social perception and social cognition over the first three years of life Interceptive Actions in Sport Simon Bennett,Keith Davids,Geert J.P.

Savelsbergh,John van der Kamp,2004-03-01 Dynamic interceptive actions are those actions for which the body or an implement must be moved into the right place at the right time in order to accomplish a task These actions are particularly prevalent in sport for example reaching to catch a ball or running towards a target to make a tackle This book is the first to offer a comprehensive review of existing theoretical research on dynamic interceptive actions as well as close examination of specific practical applications The book includes material on catching wielding tennis rackets putting in golf controlling and kicking a soccer ball It is essential reading for anybody with a close interest in motor learning and control or skill acquisition and will be of interest to students of sport psychology movement science and coaching science Perspectives on Perception and Action Herbert Heuer,Andries Sanders,2016-07-07 Originally published in 1987 this title aimed to present an eclectic and biased account of the status of perception action relationships in various fields at the time The chapters can be divided into three sections The first focuses on motor control a neglected topic in the past and hence deserving the role of the starting point of this volume In addition motor control provides a good background to discuss the clear sensory and perceptual effects However motor processes are also highly relevant to perception which was usually less emphasized in the literature at the time Therefore a special section is devoted to motor processes in perception together with the issue of integrating information from different sources The book concludes with a section on attention and selection of perceptual information for subsequent action Biosociology and Neurosociology Will Kalkhoff,Shane R. Thye,Edward J.

Lawler,2012-11-05 Features contributions aligned with interdisciplinary explosion of research on biological and neurological foundations of social behavior and organization This title focuses on complex and dynamic links between brain and human evolutionary heritage in relation to group dynamics and social interaction anti social behavior and mental health Brain and Music Stefan Koelsch,2012-04-30 A comprehensive survey of the latest neuroscientific research into the effects of music on the brain Covers a variety of topics fundamental for music perception including musical syntax musical semantics music and action music and emotion Includes general introductory chapters to engage a broad readership as well as a wealth of detailed research material for experts Offers the most empirical and most systematic work on the topics of neural correlates of musical syntax and musical semantics Integrates research from different domains such as music language action and emotion both theoretically and empirically to create a comprehensive theory of music psychology From Action to

Cognition Claes Von Hofsten,Kerstin Rosander,2007-10-19 Extensive neurophysiological and neuropsychological evidence show that perception action and cognition are closely related in the brain and develop in parallel to one another Thus perception cognition and social functioning are all anchored in the actions of the child Actions reflect the motives the problems to be solved and the constraints and possibilities of the child s body and sensory motor system The developing brain accumulates experiences which it translates into knowledge used in planning future actions Such knowledge is available because events are governed by rules and regulations The present volume discusses all these aspects of how action and cognition are related in development Action Science Wolfgang Prinz,Miriam Beisert,Arvid Herwig,2013-02-01 An overview of today s diverse theoretical and methodological approaches to action and the relationship of action and cognition The emerging field of action science is characterized by a diversity of theoretical and methodological approaches that share the basic functional belief that evolution has optimized cognitive systems to serve the demands of action This book brings together the constitutive approaches of action science in a single source covering the relation of action to such cognitive functions as perception attention memory and volition Each chapter offers a tutorial like description of a major line of inquiry written by a leading scientist in the field Taken together the chapters reflect a dynamic and rapidly growing field and provide a forum for comparison and possible integration of approaches After discussing core questions about how actions are controlled and learned the book considers ecological approaches to action science neurocognitive approaches to action understanding and attention developmental approaches to action science social actions including imitation and joint action and the relationships between action and the conceptual system grounded cognition and between volition and action An emerging discipline depends on a rich and multifaceted supply of theoretical and methodological approaches The diversity of perspectives offered in this book will serve as a guide for future explorations in action science Contributors Lawrence W
