Biotechnology And The Human Good:

Biotechnology and the Human Good C. Ben Mitchell, 2007-04-23 Some of humankind's greatest tools have been forged in the research laboratory. Who could argue that medical advances like antibiotics, blood transfusions, and pacemakers have not improved the quality of people's lives? But with each new technological breakthrough there comes an array of consequences at once predicted and unpredictable: beneficial and hazardous. Outcry over recent developments in the reproductive and genetic sciences has revealed deep fissures in society's perception of biotechnical progress. Many are concerned that reckless technological development driven by consumerist impulses and greedy entrepreneurialism has the potential to radically shift the human condition and not for the greater good. Biotechnology and the Human Good builds a case for a stewardship deeply rooted in Judeo-Christian theism to responsibly interpret and assess new technologies in a way that answers this concern. The authors jointly recognize humans not as autonomous beings but as ones accountable to each other, to the world they live in, and to God. They argue that to question and critique how fields like cybernetics, nanotechnology, and genetics might affect our future is not anti-science, anti-industry, or anti-progress but rather a way to promote human flourishing, common sense, and good stewardship. A synthetic work drawing on the thought of a physician, ethicists, and a theologian, Biotechnology and the Human Good reminds us that although technology is a powerful and often awe-inspiring tool, it is what lies in the heart and soul of who wields this tool that truly makes the difference in our world. Biotechnology and the Human Good C. Genetically modified foods are foods derived from genetically modified organisms have had specific changes introduced into their DNA by genetic engineering techniques The main aim of genetically modified crops is to produce a food that is able to survive even if any harmful chemicals or pesticides or herbicides are sprayed Genetically engineered foods have had their DNA changed using genes from other plants or animals Scientists take the gene for a desired trait in one plant or animal and they insert that gene into a cell of another plant or animal Genetic engineering can be done with plants animals or bacteria and other very small organisms Genetic engineering allows scientists to move desired genes from one plant or animal into another Genes can also be moved from an animal to a plant or vice versa Genetic engineering also helps speed up the process of creating new foods with desired traits Genetically modified material sounds a little bit like science fiction territory but in reality much of what we eat on a daily basis is a genetically modified organism Whether or not these modified foods are actually healthy is still up for debate and many times you don t even know that you are buying something genetically modified The book will be of help to researcher in the field of agriculture crop improvement biotechnology etc It will also be helpful to teachers and students for better understanding of the subject
