As a matter of fact, auto stores can be found in all parts of the world as long as there are automobiles there.

IBIS World projected that the Auto Parts Stores industry is expected to grow slowly over the five years to 2016. They stated that per capita disposable income and corporate profit boosted the demand for auto parts. Furthermore, favorable car usage trends have led to growth in demand for industry products in the short term.

Nevertheless, advancements in motor vehicle technology have made it increasingly difficult for vehicle owners to repair and maintain vehicles without professional help. Going forward, the revenue generated by operators in the industry is expected to grow at the same pace as the previous period.

As the national level of per capita disposable income continues to rise, some consumers will increase their spending on maintaining and fixing their automobile hence the increase in demand for products and services from the Auto Stores industry
