

Assessing creativity: The Test for Creative Thinking - Drawing Production (TCT-DP)

Ulrich K. Jähne

University of Bamberg, Germany (education and psychology)

The Test for Creative Thinking - Drawing Production (TCT-DP), as design, concept and evaluation criteria as well as applications and results of application are described. The test was designed to measure a more holistic concept of creativity than the more quantitatively oriented traditional divergent thinking tests. The specific design using several drawings is explained. The drawing production is evaluated by means of a set of criteria, which at the same time represent the underlying test construct. The test has been tested with various age and ability groups; there were no significant differences between male and female subjects. Further studies with data concerning the reliability and validity of the TCT-DP are provided.

INTRODUCTION

More traditional creativity tests give more quantitative information about a very restricted aspect of creativity only. This was especially true for the two creativity tests which were published and available in Germany in the 1980s, when two differences in the construction of a new measure called Test Instrumente, the Test zur Divergenz Denken (Test for Divergent Thinking) (TDD-1; Mollenhau, 1977) and the Test zur Konvergenz Denken (Test-Convergency Test) (TCT; Schupp, 1977), were very much oriented on to their aspect of application. The TDD was constructed only for three classes (4th, 5th and 6th) and only with adolescents and adults from age 17 on with good school education, where the test only was used accepted as a fairly high level. Both instruments are relatively sensitive to application and evaluation errors. The TDD takes a theoretical basis, it consists of a test founded on two conceptual collections of various creativity tasks from the literature (collection of Guilford, Torrance, Wallach and Kravitz). The TCT, which is very much dependent on general verbal and intellectual abilities. Furthermore both tests are open tests, they are closer to intelligence tests, as far as application in classroom and high assessment after ability or divergent thinking respectively, were concerned only to the aspect of productivity, that is the quantity of usually verbally described ideas.

These limitations in concept and range of application were one reason for Jähne and Jähne (1995, 1996, Jähne and Jähne, 1998) to develop their new instrument, the Test zur schöpferischen Denken - Konvergenz (TDD-2) (Jähne and Jähne, 1997), or, in English: Test for Creative Thinking - Drawing Production (TCT-DP) (Jähne and Jähne, 1998).¹ This instrument serves not to be seen as an attempt to apply a more holistic and generalised approach to diagnosis of creativity. The German term 'schöpferisch' was chosen consciously in order to ¹ The TDD-2 is available in English in parallel to its German version (TDD-2) Test-Instrumente, Drawing.
