Cross-theoretical Explorations of Interlocutors and their Individual Differences Laura Gurzynski-Weiss, 2020-01-21 This book examines the role of interlocutors and their individual differences IDs in second language L2 development from four theoretical lenses the cognitive interactionist approach sociocultural theory the variationist approach and complex dynamic systems theory A theoretical overview to each approach is written by a preeminent scholar in the framework and each overview is followed by an empirical study that demonstrates how interlocutor IDs can be fruitfully researched within that framework To maximize readability and impact the chapters follow common organizing questions inviting the engagement of L2 researchers students and teachers alike Collectively the chapters in the current volume initiate a cohesive discussion of the theoretical roles of the interlocutor within these four popular approaches to SLA illustrate how interlocutor IDs influence L2 opportunities and or development present innovative original empirical research on interlocutors and their IDs within each approach and provide theoretical empirical and methodological guidance for future research on interlocutors and their IDs A powerful contribution of this volume highlighted in the concluding chapter s synthesis is the common call across all four approaches for the irrefutable role and need for research on interlocutors and their IDs The volume also demonstrates how despite theoretical and methodological differences the four approaches are advancing congruently toward a more robust understanding of the multifaceted and dynamic nature of all interlocutors and their IDs and thus toward a more complete and accurate picture of their influence on L2 development

Second Language Acquisition Learning Theories and Recent Approaches will aim to present the process of learning an additional language apart from one's native language. The process of understanding writing and speaking another language with fluency involves complex intellectual and emotional responses as well as continuous information processing abilities. A variety of perspectives is needed in order for learning to take place. Many factors both internal and external are involved in determining why some learn a second language at a faster rate than others. With an internal or external focus of attention, various linguistic techniques have explored the basic questions about SLA. With the ability to convey and structure information in a second language, there is a need for what is being learned to be viewed from various perspectives. The focus on continuous natural UG capability for language learning versus communicative processing requirements differs among viewpoints on how SLA develops. This book intends to provide readers with language acquisition, language comprehension, language development, language processing, and psychological and social variables which have been largely excluded by purely language approaches.

Ellis presents a comprehensive overview of the different theories in this field and examines critical reactions to them. The book reflects recent trends in looking at cognitive and social aspects of second language acquisition as well as examining the roles played by implicit and explicit instruction in language learning. An excellent and much needed in depth review of the research on how children and literate adults learn a second language. Ellis provides a sound knowledge base for language teachers and beginning graduate students in applied linguistics focusing on relevant findings of research on second language learning by children and literate adults in both naturalistic and instructed contexts.
