2011-2012 GRANT APPLICATION GUIDELINES

In order to be considered for a grant from the National Institutes of Health, the applicant must be a U.S. or foreign organization. The purposes of grants for research and education studies related to the human condition are to promote and advance scientific knowledge and to improve the health of the population.

The National Institutes of Health also sponsors research proposals that are health-related or support activities, which are funded through a separate process. These proposals are independently evaluated according to panel III, with NCIH's strategic health research priorities, study feasibility and cost, and the applicant's research history for review. Research is considered in applying scientific subjects in terms of proposed scientific knowledge, the proposed project description, and proposed overall budget, a two-year grant period is required for the project, and existing resources will be used for successful grant completion. The situation for each nation's proposed research is discussed in detail below.

Grant applications in terms of NCIH will not be considered. Grant applications will be given priority based on the research interest and the research history of the applicant and will be evaluated. Research is only for health, research, education, and other programs related to research.

For grant applications submitted to NCIH, the applicant must submit the National Institutes of Health Grant Application Form, NCIH Grant Application Form, and the official grant award application form. However, grant requests will not be considered unless complete documentation is submitted for the NCIH Grant Application.

- (1) Grant applications of the last research proposal submitted to NCIH.
