BIOMES

Take a closer look at the images above. Each is home to a variety of plants and animals, but no two are the same. Although they're all capable to life, there are quite a lot of differences too. Many of these differences are abiotic, or have to do with the non-living parts of the environment. Abiotic factors include temperature, the amount of oxygen in the air or water, and the kind of soil present.

infer, or make your best guess, about some of the abiotic factors in each of the images.

Location	Temperature	Amount of rainfall

Specifying these locations are all home to many trees, or living, factors as well. What kinds of species do you think live in each of these places? Feel free to list plants, animals, birds, fish, insects, and even microscopic life like bacteria!

Chaparral

Tundra

Lastly, the chapparral biome is a coastal biome with hot, dry summers and mild winters. It has mostly shrubs with a few short trees. Deer, birds, and rabbits live in the chapparral.

Tundra When we think of deserts, we usually think of a hot and dry place, but did you know that deserts can be cold too? The Tundra in Alaska is the largest cold desert, but there is so much snow (and) that it's still considered a desert. Both plants and animals must adapt to dry life in the desert. Many develop unique ways of surviving such as water storage.

extremely nutrient rich soil. Here you'll find a variety of plants and animals. Due to their dry and hot climate, plants in both savanna and grasslands are adapted to survive relatively common fires.

Desert When we think of deserts, we usually think of a hot and dry place, but did you know that deserts can be cold too? The Desert in Antarctica is the largest desert in the world! It's cold there, but there is so much snow (and) that it's still considered a desert. Both plants and animals must adapt to dry life in the desert. Many develop unique ways of surviving such as water storage or the ability to remain dormant (similar to hibernation) for a long time.

Forest There are several different kinds of forest biomes, including: The rainforest is most likely the most famous forest. This lush forest is home to a wide variety of plants and animals. The average height of a tree in this abundant ecosystem is 1000 cm (400 inches). Here you can find parrots, sloths, and many other animals.

The temperate forest is common in the US, Canada, Europe, and Asia. Here you'll find deciduous trees that lose their leaves in the winter. In fact, that's what this biome is famous for: it's a unique place where the trees lose their leaves. These forests are home to many animals, including bears, deer, and many other animals. The boreal is a cold forest with cone-bearing, coniferous trees. These forests are found in Northern Canada and Russia. The days are long in the summer and short in the winter due to the amount of time the sun is out.

BIOMES

Earth is an amazing planet. It has many different environments that make perfect homes for millions of species. The largest major habitats that exist worldwide are known as biomes. Most likely, you're familiar with many of these: desert, rainforest, grassland, etc. Each biome is unique and has its own set of characteristics that make it different from the others. One of the most important factors in maintaining biodiversity, or the amazing variety of life, that makes our Earth so abundant in species and resources.

How many biomes are there? Do all water environments constitute a single aquatic biome? Are all fire-filled ecosystems considered a forest biome? The number of biomes you could simply depend on how specific you'd like to be. Let's take a look at some of the largest biomes, and the abiotic and biotic factors that define them.

Marine

Freshwater

Savanna

For fish, birds, frogs, whales, and other aquatic species. Aquatic Biomes Since water covers over 70% of the Earth, the largest biomes are the aquatic biomes. Marine aquatic biomes include coral reefs and estuaries, but the two major ones are the marine and freshwater biomes. The marine biome, made up of the world's oceans, is so big it's usually divided into smaller biomes. Estuaries, or the area where the ocean meets the land, is actually a times larger than all of Earth's other biomes combined. The movement of water in the marine biome creates ocean currents which play a major role in creating weather.

Smaller freshwater biomes consist of lakes, ponds, and rivers. These are often part of the marine biomes because they do not contain salt. Freshwater biomes are especially important to us humans as they provide the water that we use to drink. All aquatic biomes provide homes for diverse plant and animal life. The largest and most diverse of these are found in the Amazon, the Congo, and the Yangtze. The temperate grasslands, on the other hand, make up the plains of middle America.
