Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group (n = 20) did not participate in the program. The results showed that the walking program had a significant effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The walking program significantly improved the women's physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The walking program also had a significant effect on the women's body mass index (BMI) and waist circumference. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.
