Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross orthographic research

Resourcing Early Learners Sue Nichols, Jennifer Rowsell, Helen Nixon, Sophia Rainbird, 2012 The landscape of early childhood education and care is changing Governments world wide are assuming increasing authority in relation to child rearing in the years before school entry beyond the traditional role in assisting parents to do the best they can by their children As part of a social agenda aimed at forming citizens well prepared to play an active part in a globalised knowledge economy the idea of early learning expresses the necessity of engaging caregivers right from the start of childrens lives Nichols Rowsell Rainbird and Nixon investigate this trend over three years in two countries and three contrasting regions by setting themselves the task of tracing every service and agent offering resources under the banner of early learning. Far from a dry catalogue, the study involves in-depth ethnographic research in fascinating spaces such as a church-run centre for African refugee women and children, a state-of-the-art community library and an Australian country town. Included is an unprecedented inventory of an entire suburban mall. Richly visually documented, the study employs emerging methods such as Google mapping to trace the travels of actual parents as they search for particular resources. Each chapter features a context investigated in this large international study: the library, the mall, the clinic and the church. The author team unravels new spaces and new networks at work in early childhood literacy and development. The New Cambridge English Course 2 Teacher's Book Michael Swan, Catherine Walter, 1990-06-28. The New Cambridge English Course is a four-level course for learners of English. The Development of Reading Skills Thomas H. Carr, 1985. Focusing on how children learn to read in a language they have previously only spoken, this book illustrates the skill theory of reading development which encompasses both new perceptual processes and modified but familiar integrative cognitive processes of language comprehension. The chapters discuss the following aspects of learning to read: 1 phonemic analysis, spelling and reading; 2 literacy background and reading development in a second language; 3 knowing words and understanding texts; 4 discourse structure and mental models; 5 the impact of classroom activities on beginning reading development; 6 using component skills analysis to integrate findings on reading development; and 7 bridging the gap between theory and practice in reading. The final chapter lists several journals that publish high-quality research on reading and a number of books that provide systematic introduction to the area of reading.
