Dr. Robert M. La Follette, Governor of Wisconsin, is a politician who represents conservatism in education and social policy which is commonly referred to as traditionalism. The original goal of the Progressives was to make government more efficient and to bring about reforms in the political system. The Progressives were not against change but were against radical change. Dr. La Follette's famous speech, "The Moral Reform of Education," is a classic example of traditionalism in education and society. He argued that education should be a moral reform, not a social reform, and that it should be a moral reform, not a social reform.
