Applications of Action Learning George P. Boulden, 2017-04-26 Action Learning is the brain child of Professor Reginald Reg Revans Revans believed that management was a practical subject carried out by practical people in the real world of work not an academic subject to be taught by University Professors who had no experience of the real world of work Action learning uses the participant's actual job to identify and satisfy real learning needs the specific Knowledge Skills Experience and Behavior appropriate to the situation Unlike training It provides a holistic framework through which all four aspects of our behavioral package are objectively assessed by the facilitator and comrades in adversity to help participants identify the things they need to change to be successful These needs once identified are met through a development program created and monitored with the help and support of the facilitator and colleagues in the set This book 1 Explains the philosophy of Action Learning 2 Describes the various models and their application 3 Provides an objective analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the various options 4 Examines how Action Learning can help in today's world to develop organisations and their people 5 Offers reference information for those who would like to learn more Note Whilst Reg's focus for Action Learning was on management development this process is equally applicable to any personal or organisational development need We hope you will find this book useful and are happy to help interested readers with further information or advice on specific program design and management investment Action Learning Wojciech W. Gasparski, 2017-11-30 Praxiology is the study of working and doing from the point of view of effectiveness. It has three components: analysis of concepts involving purposive actions; critique of modes of action from the viewpoint of efficiency; and normative advisory aspects in recommendations for increasing human efficacy. This sixth volume of the Praxiology series focuses on action learning. Learning from distinguishable action is surprisingly different than learning from a subject expert in human or book form. For those who have worked with and in action learning, the latest form is always distinguishably different from a former experience. Action learning programs are not in general intended to tackle puzzles; namely questions to which an answer may be said to exist even if that answer is difficult to find. Action learning is intended to help to develop the ability to tackle problems or opportunities of which different persons all experienced intelligent and motivated might well advocate different courses of action, all reasonable. The essentials of action learning according to this volume are: there can be no learning unless the participant receives feedback about his/her performance; participants learn only of their own volition and never at the will of others; the volition to learn is most readily engendered by the lure of success or by the fear of calamity. Building upon these essentials, the authors view action learning as a process of inquiry beginning with the experience of not knowing what to do next and finding that an answer is not available from current expertise. All chapters in this volume are sound contributions to the continuing debate on the processes of learning from distinguishable action. Action Learning is intriguing reading for sociologists, philosophers, managers, and researchers of all disciplines.

Action Learning Peter Cauwelier, George Boak, 2025-05-27 People undertake action learning work in small groups to tackle organisational and social problems and to learn from their experience of working together to bring about change. Having a dedicated facilitator or a coach for a group can make the process more effective and rewarding. This book provides examples and analyses of effective behaviours of action learning facilitators and coaches. Action learning is an approach to individual, team, and organisational learning. In an action learning group, people work collaboratively to make sense of the problems that they are addressing, to devise plans to bring about improvements, and to reflect on their progress and on what they have learned. Having someone act as a facilitator or a coach for an action learning group is often necessary to ensure that the group finds a helpful balance between solving the immediate problems that face them and achieving genuine learning, not just about the problem but also about themselves as individuals and about the group as a dynamic unit. In this book, experienced practitioners of action learning provide a rich range of examples of the use of facilitators and coaches in action learning groups. Contributors from the UK, the USA, Thailand, Taiwan, the Caribbean, and the Netherlands offer case studies, reflections, advice, and the fruits of their research into this important topic. This book was originally published as a special issue of Action Learning Research and Practice.
