amateur sport newspapers often noted a pedestrian mania or walking fever that only began to give way in the mid 1880s to fast rising crazes for baseball bicycling and roller skating As competitive walking faded however another kind of walking that had also begun in the late 1860s came to full flower Between 1890 and 1930 hundreds of men women even children and entire families were on the nation s roads and railroad tracks trekking between widely separated points frequently New York and San Francisco and sometimes moving in unusual ways such as on roller skates or by walking barefooted backwards on stilts or while rolling a hoop To finance their attention seeking journeys many sold souvenir postcards Although they claimed various reasons for making these treks for most the treks clearly were a means of personal expression The public usually found these performers entertaining but public officials and newspaper editors often denounced them as nuisances or frauds Tapping vintage postcards and old newspaper articles this is the first book to bring back to view this once familiar feature of American life Following a prologue providing background and context five chapters address different aspects of this trekking phenomenon In 106 illustrations and seventy six vignettes some poignant many amusing all engaging the book provides a fair representation of the many trekkers who moved across the country during those years An epilogue offers some final musings about those trekking performers and their place in the annals of American popular culture DC Sports Chris Elzey,David K.
