

UN Guiding Principles on Business & Human Rights

What are human rights?

RESPECT & DIGNITY

People have a right to be treated with dignity regardless of their nationality, place of residence, sex, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, language or other status

PILLARS OF THE UN GUIDING PRINCIPLES

The State duty to protect human rights against abuse by third parties, including business, through appropriate policies, legislation, regulations and adjudication

The corporate responsibility to respect human rights meaning to act with due diligence to avoid infringing on the rights of others and address adverse impacts with which they are involved

The need for greater access to effective remedy both judicial and non-judicial, for victims of business-related human rights abuses

The benefits and opportunities for companies recognised as respecting human rights include:

- Improved risk management with less chance of business disruptions, public campaigns and criticisms, litigation, reputational harm, and harm to employee retention and recruitment;
- Greater access to business opportunities with governments, financiers, business customers and buyers;
- Positive recognition, including from socially responsible investors and civil society organisations, of the company's improving human rights performance and its efforts to address challenges;
- Improved relationships with workers, communities and other stakeholders in societies, resulting in greater trust and a stronger social licence to operate;
- Improved ability to preserve their reputation when negative impacts occur, given better public understanding of their overall efforts to avoid such incidents;
- Improved ability to recruit the next generation of young leaders, who are increasingly focused on companies' performance in this area;
- A comparative advantage with a growing number of stock exchanges and public and private financial institutions scrutinising companies' non-financial performance, including with regard to human rights.

Business and Human Rights Nadia Bernaz, 2016-10-04 Business corporations can and do violate human rights all over the world and they are often not held to account Emblematic cases and situations such as the state of the Niger Delta and the collapse of the Rana Plaza factory are examples of corporate human rights abuses which are not adequately prevented and remedied Business and human rights as a field seeks to enhance the accountability of business companies and businesspeople in the human rights area or to phrase it differently to bridge the accountability gap Bridging the accountability gap is to be understood as both setting standards and holding corporations and businesspeople to account if violations occur Adopting a legal perspective this book presents the ways in which this dual undertaking has been and could be further carried out in the future and evaluates the extent to which the various initiatives in the field bridge the corporate accountability gap It looks at the historical background of the field of business and human rights and examines salient periods events and cases The book then goes on to explore the relevance of international human rights law and international criminal law for global business International soft law and policy initiatives which have blossomed in recent years are evaluated along with private modes of regulation The book also examines how domestic law especially the domestic law of multinational companies home countries can be used to prevent and redress corporate related human rights violations

Children's Rights Law in the Global Human Rights Landscape Eva Brems, Ellen Desmet, Wouter Vandenhole, 2017-04-21 Children's rights law is often studied and perceived in isolation from the broader field of human rights law This volume explores the inter-relationship between children's rights law and more general human rights law in order to see whether elements from each could successfully inform the other Children's rights law has a number of distinctive characteristics such as the emphasis on the best interests of the child the use of general principles and the inclusion of third parties e.g. parents and other care takers in treaty provisions The first part of this book questions whether these features could be a source of inspiration for general human rights law In part two the reverse question is asked could children s rights law draw inspiration from developments in other branches of human rights law that focus on other specific categories of rights holders such as women persons with disabilities indigenous peoples or older persons Finally the interaction between children s rights law and human rights law and the potential for their isolation inspiration or integration may be coloured or determined by the thematic issue under consideration Therefore the third part of the book studies the interplay between children s rights law and human rights law in the context of specific topics intra family relations LGBTQI marginalization migration media the environment and transnational human rights obligations
