

Key Question: What is the purpose of transcription, where does it occur, and what are the key steps in the process? Transcription is the first stage of gene expression. It takes place in the nucleus and is carried out by the enzyme RNA polymerase, which rewrites the DNA into a primary RNA transcript using a single template strand of DNA. The protein-coding portion of a gene is bounded by an upstream start (promoter) region and a downstream terminator region. These regions control transcription by telling RNA polymerase where to start and stop transcription. In eukaryotes, non protein-coding sections called introns must first be removed and the remaining exons spliced together to form the mature mRNA before the gene can be translated into a protein. This editing process also occurs in the nucleus.

Transcription is carried out by RNA polymerase (RNAP)

- In which direction is the RNA strand synthesized? _____
