Science in the Making at the Margin Jrene Rahm, 2010-01-01 We know little about diverse youths engagement in science outside of school the form such engagement takes and its impact on science literacy development and identity as a potential insider to science We need to know more about why how and for whom out of school settings make a difference Science in the Making at the Margin offers some answers through an in depth and theoretically well grounded multisited ethnography of three very different out of school settings an afterschool program for girls only a youth garden program and a Math and Science Upward Bound Program Grounded in sociocultural historical theory this book explores youths meaning making of science and co constructions of new levels of understandings of science as well as how they come to position themselves in relation to science through participation in science practices at the margin The author highlights the multiplicity of learning becoming and hybridity that constitute the learning of science in the three sites studied Her analysis suggests that most youth position themselves as science users as youth who are creating with and learning through science with others in textually rich environments and situations and in ways that are meaningful to them Their identity as users of science is grounded in the forms of engagement supported by the three science practices The challenge is then to leverage such literacy beyond the practices themselves Turning Your School Around Robert Barr, Debra Yates, 2011-11-01 Learn a step by step protocol for the self guided audit that focuses on the most crucial areas of school improvement identified in The Kids Left Behind the nationally recognized work by Robert D Barr and William H Parrett The authors give readers a realistic view of the work involved in a top to bottom audit while providing supporting evidence of its effectiveness Learning at Not-School Julian Sefton-Green, 2013 This book focuses on programs organizations and institutions that have developed in parallel to public schooling which offer education in a non traditional non school setting Informal Learning and Digital Media Kirsten Drotner, Hans Siggaard Jensen, Kim Christian Schröder, 2009-12-14 The book provides an engaging overview of the ways in which digital media impact on current understandings of informal learning and it offers a range of grounded studies of the changing relations between digital media and informal learning processes with a particular focus on young people. A variety of international scholars examine these processes across a number of sites and settings from Japan to Finland and the USA and they discuss their implications for education, ICT and media. The volume is an ideal resource for graduate students as well as for practitioners and policy makers.

Digital Media and Technology in Afterschool Programs, Libraries, and Museums Becky Herr-Stephenson, 2011. An investigation of how three kinds of youth organizations have integrated digital practices into their programs. Digital media and technology have become culturally and economically powerful parts of contemporary middle class American childhoods. Immersed in various forms of digital media as well as mobile and Web based technologies, young people today appear to develop knowledge and skills through participation in media. This MacArthur Report examines the ways in which afterschool programs, libraries and museums use digital media to support extracurricular learning. It investigates how these three varieties of youth serving organizations have incorporated technological infrastructure and digital practices into their programs, what types of participation and learning digital practices support and how research in digital media and learning can contribute to better integration of technology within and across these organizations. The authors review a range of programs including the long running Computer Clubhouse movement established in 1993 in partnership with MIT's Media Lab and then use the idea of media ecologies to investigate the role that digital media play or could play in these intermediary spaces for learning. They call for less anecdotal, more empirical and methodologically sound studies to help us understand the affordances of digital media for learning within and across these programs, for research focused on the relationship between digital media and the effectiveness of youth serving organizations and for further study of schools within childhood media ecologies.
