Agent-Based Modelling of Socio-Technical Systems Koen H. van Dam, Igor Nikolic, Zofia Lukszo, 2012-10-08 Decision makers in large scale interconnected network systems require simulation models for decision support The behaviour of these systems is determined by many actors situated in a dynamic multi actor multi objective and multi level environment How can such systems be modelled and how can the socio technical complexity be captured Agent based modelling is a proven approach to handle this challenge This book provides a practical introduction to agent based modelling of socio technical systems based on a methodology that has been developed at TU Delft and which has been deployed in a large number of case studies The book consists of two parts the first presents the background theory and methodology as well as practical guidelines and procedures for building models In the second part this theory is applied to a number of case studies where for each model the development steps are presented extensively preparing the reader for creating own models Sustainable

This book constitutes the refereed proceedings of the 5th Conference on Knowledge Engineering and the Semantic Web KESW 2014 held in Kazan Russia in September October 2014 The 18 revised full papers presented together with 4 short system descriptions were carefully reviewed and selected from 44 submissions The papers address research issues related to semantic web linked data ontologies natural language processing knowledge representation Modelling Human-Flood

Interactions Yared Abayneh Abebe, 2021-02-25 The negative impacts of floods are attributed to the extent and magnitude of a flood hazard and the vulnerability and exposure of natural and human elements In flood risk management FRM studies it is crucial to model the interaction between human and flood subsystems across multiple spatial temporal and organizational scales Models should address the heterogeneity that exists within the human subsystem and incorporate institutions that shape the behaviour of individuals Hence the main objectives of the dissertation are to develop a modelling framework and a methodology to build holistic models for FRM and to assess how coupled human flood interaction models support FRM policy analysis and decision making To achieve the objectives the study introduces the Coupled fLood Agent Institution Modelling framework CLAIM CLAIM integrates actors institutions the urban environment hydrologic and hydrodynamic processes and external factors which affect FRM activities The framework draws on the complex system perspective and conceptualizes the interaction of floods humans and their environment as drivers of flood hazard vulnerability and exposure The human and flood subsystems are modelled using agent based models and hydrodynamic models respectively The two models are dynamically coupled to understand human flood interactions and to investigate the effect of institutions on FRM policy analysis

new models for cybersecurity risk management partly based on the use of cyber insurance It contains A set of mathematical models for cybersecurity risk management including i a model to assist companies in determining their optimal budget allocation between security products and cyber insurance and ii a model to assist insurers in designing cyber insurance products The models use adversarial risk analysis to account for the behavior of threat actors as well as the behavior of companies and insurers To inform these models we draw on psychological and behavioural economics studies of decision making by individuals regarding cybersecurity and cyber insurance We also draw on organizational decision making studies involving cybersecurity and cyber insurance Its theoretical and methodological findings will appeal to researchers across a wide range of cybersecurity related disciplines including risk and decision analysis analytics technology management actuarial sciences behavioural sciences and economics The practical findings will help cybersecurity professionals and insurers enhance cybersecurity and cyber insurance thus benefiting society as a whole This book grew out of a two year European Union funded project under Horizons 2020 called CYBECO Supporting Cyber Insurance from a Behavioral Choice Perspective
