Plant-parasitic and Entomogenous Nematode Research, 1991

Advances in Molecular Plant Nematology F. Lamberti, C. Oe Giorgi, David McK. Bird, 2013-06-29 Plant parasitic nematodes are a main pest to crops For example the root knot nematodes belonging to the genus Meloidogyne are worldwide in their distribution and attack almost every type of crop causing considerable losses of yield and affecting quality of produce The cyst nematodes within the genera Globodera and Heterodera constitute a major group of plant pathogens in many countries throughout the world suppressing yields of potato sugar beet soybean and cereals Several nematodes such as longidorids and trichodorids are implicated in the transmission of numerous plant viruses Many others cause constraints to agricultural production either locally or on large areas However despite their economic importance they account for worldwide crop reduction in excess of 10% plant parasitic nematodes are still poorly understood because most of them are obligate parasites of roots Environmental concerns over the agricultural use of pesticides demand the development of alternative measures to control them To achieve environmentally sound control knowledge of the basic biology of nematodes must be expanded Important research areas include understanding the molecular bases for pathogenicity the molecular mechanisms of the host parasite interactions and the genetic bases for population fluctuations The workshop has for the first time brought together an international group of researchers using molecular approaches to study plant parasitic nematodes and their host responses

The Cyst Nematodes S.B. Sharma, 2013-03-14 When Franklin published her book on cyst

nematodes in 1951 the cyst nematodes were already known as serious pests of brassicas cereals potatoes and sugar beets However at that time this group of nematode with about 12 species was considered to be largely temperate in distribution Now a total of 105 species including those that are considered as synonyms or species inquirende by some or all within six genera of cyst nematodes have been described from temperate tropical and subtropical regions and at least five species are important constraints to crop production in tropical agriculture The previous impression of localization of cyst nematodes in the temperate region was seemingly an artifact due to a greater concentration of nematologists in the temperate regions Based on my own experience of working in several Asian and African countries I believe that many more undescribed species are present in the tropical countries of Asia and Africa and probably in other tropical regions Most growers extension workers and research managers in these regions are still not aware of the possible harm of presence of these nematodes in their agricultural soils The cyst nematodes are perhaps smaller than the smallest available computer chip but they are very well programmed to survive and propagate despite severe hardships These nematodes are very selective in their choice of food about 50% of known species are parasites of plants mainly in the families Poaceae and Fabaceae

Achieving sustainable cultivation of soybeans Volume 2 Prof. Henry T. Nguyen, 2018-02-20 Detailed coverage of oomycete fungal viral and bacterial diseases affecting soybeans Reviews developments in disease and pest resistant varieties as well as integrated pest and weed management Summarises research on developing food and non food uses from improving nutritional properties to uses in animal feed and biodiesel
