Abstract

Abstract—This study examined the impact of the 2007–2008 recession on dependent family caregivers in two of the most vulnerable senior health stages in older populations: declining health and living in dependent family caregivers. In the National Longitudinal Study of Aging, we found that the recession was associated with a decline in the number of dependent family caregivers and a decline in the number of dependent family caregivers who were female. These findings suggest that the recession may have had a negative impact on the health and well-being of dependent family caregivers and their families.
