Q I have a 1994 Ford Taurus with 100,000 miles. The car has been running fine, but recently I noticed a slight vibration when driving at 60 mph. The vibration is most noticeable in the front seat area. I have checked the tires and they appear to be in good condition. Could this be a suspension issue?

A A vibration at 60 mph is most likely a tire issue, even if the tires appear to be in good condition. It could be a balance issue or a tire that is slightly out of round. Have the tires balanced and rotated. If the vibration persists, it could be a suspension issue, such as a worn ball joint or a loose tie rod end. Have a professional mechanic inspect the suspension components.

Abstract—This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the CON group remained sedentary. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition compared to the CON group. The results suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is effective in improving muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
