Medicine, mobility and the empire Markku Hokkanen, 2017-11-02 David Livingstone's Zambesi expedition marked the beginning of an ongoing series of medical exchanges between the British and Malawians This book explores these entangled histories by placing medicine in the frameworks of mobilities and networks that extended across Southern Africa and beyond It provides a new approach to the study of medicine and empire Drawing on a range of written and oral sources the book argues that mobility was a crucial aspect of intertwined medical cultures that shared a search for therapy in changing conditions Mobile individuals ideas and materials played key roles in medical networks that involved both professionals and laypeople These networks connected colonial medicine with Protestant Christianity and migrant labour The book will be of value to scholars and students of history and anthropology of colonialism and medicine as well as a wider readership interested in the plural search for health in Africa and globally Imperial Medicine and Indigenous Societies David Arnold, 1988 In recent years it has become apparent that the interaction of imperialism with disease medical research and the administration of health policies is considerably more complex This book reflects the breadth and interdisciplinary range of current scholarship applied to a variety of imperial experiences in different continents Common themes and widely

Curing Their Ills Megan Vaughan, 1991 This is a lively and original book which treats Western biomedical discourse about illness in Africa as a cultural system that constructed the African out of widely varying and sometimes improbable materials Referring mainly to British dependencies in East and Central Africa in the late nineteenth to the mid twentieth century it draws on diverse sources ranging from court records and medical journals to fund raising posters and jungle doctor cartoons Curing Their Ills brings refreshing concreteness and dynamism to the discussion of European attitudes toward their others as it traces the shifts and variations in medical discourse on African illness Among the topics the book covers are the differences between missionary medicine which emphasized individual responsibility for sin and disease and secular medicine which tended toward an ethnic model of collective pathology leprosy and the construction of the social role of the leper and the struggle to define insanity in a context of great ignorance about what the normal African was like and a determination to crush indigenous beliefs about bewitchment The underlying assumption of this discourse was that disease was produced by the disintegration and degeneration of tribal cultures which was seen to be occurring in the process of individualization and modernization This was a cultural rather than a materialist model the argument being that Africans were made sick not by the material changes to their lives and environment but by their cultural maladaptation to modern life The scientific discourse about the biological inferiority of the African traced by one school of scientists to defects in the frontal lobe makes painful reading today it persisted into the 1950s
