1) What are the primary characteristics of living things and describe how each contributes?

(Order: all living things exhibit complex organization, metabolism, homeostasis)

Reproduction: The characteristics include an organism's ability to change genetically from one generation to the next through sexual or asexual reproduction. Sexual reproduction involves the fusion of gametes (egg and sperm) to form a zygote, which then develops into a new organism. Asexual reproduction involves the production of offspring from a single parent, without the fusion of gametes.

Cells and the cell theory: Cells are the basic units of structure and function in living organisms. The cell theory states that all living organisms are composed of cells, and that cells are the smallest units of life that can perform all the functions of life.

Energy and metabolism: Energy is the capacity to do work, and metabolism is the sum of all chemical reactions that occur within an organism. Metabolism includes both catabolic reactions (which break down molecules to release energy) and anabolic reactions (which use energy to build up molecules).

Response to the environment: All organisms respond to their environment in various ways. This response can be a direct result of the organism's internal state, or it can be a result of the organism's interaction with its environment.

Reproduction and development: Reproduction is the process by which an organism produces offspring. Development is the process by which an organism grows and changes from a single-celled zygote into a multicellular organism. Both reproduction and development are essential for the survival of a species.

2) What is biology?

3) What is the study of life? Describe the organization of organisms (cellular, tissue, organ, and organismal levels) and the flow of information.
