the most common cause of the disease. The bacteria are found in the soil and in the water. They are also found in the feces of infected animals. The bacteria enter the body through the mouth or through the skin. The disease is characterized by a fever, chills, and a rash. The rash is usually on the arms and legs. The disease is usually fatal. The only treatment is antibiotics. The disease is preventable by avoiding contact with infected animals and by wearing protective clothing. The disease is also preventable by vaccination. The vaccine is made from the bacteria and is given to children and adults. The vaccine is usually given in two doses. The first dose is given at birth and the second dose is given at age 12. The vaccine is very effective in preventing the disease. The disease is a serious threat to public health and it is important to take steps to prevent it.
