

Question 10: Independent Assortment and Gene Linkage

100

1000

Most of good will consists of a general knowledge of the company. The knowledge of the customers and the big financial firms are more specific. The first good will that was not taken into account should be measured. It is the company's reputation as a reliable, efficient, good-paying, and ethical employer. It is the company's reputation as a good employer.

Intervening variables could therefore well account for observed relationships between the two practices and the resulting reduction in greenhouse-gas emissions. For example, the use of manure with anaerobic-digestion systems, which produces gas, may have a more effect on the total gases if the production of gas in a biogas-plant is used for the production of electricity or substituted natural gas, a biomass or a renewable energy source.
