FREQUENCY COMPENSATION
The frequency compensation characteristic of Figure 1 is used to improve system load pickup performance by restraining voltage recovery until frequency has also started to recover.

The regulator is shipped from the factory set at a 47 Hz "corner frequency" for 50 Hz systems. For 60 Hz systems, a 57 Hz corner frequency is achieved by removing the "50-50" external link.

OVEREXCITATION TIME DELAY
If exciter field voltage exceeds 52 ± 2 Vdc, the regulator automatically removes the field current, after a time delay. The time delay is inversely proportional to the magnitude of the detected field over voltage condition up to 95 ± 5 Vdc point. Beyond 95 ± 5 Vdc, the field voltage is removed at a much faster rate. This shutdown function may be disabled for parallel operation by linking terminals N and D together.

INSTALLATION

MOUNTING

The regulator may be mounted on the generator in any convenient position. Refer to outline drawing Figure 3. Figure 4 provides the drilling template.

NOTE

The ground terminal must be bonded either to a metal ground by the mounting screw or by means of a cable to the most suitable earthing point available close to the regulator.

EXCITER FIELD POWER CIRCUIT

Connect regulator + wire to the brushless exciter field F+ terminal, and the - wire to the field F- terminal. Refer to Figure 5.

CAUTION

The DC resistance of the exciter field must be equal to or greater than 6 ohms and less than 100 ohms.

If the exciter field resistance is less than 6 ohms, and if the full-load field current does not exceed the maximum continuous current rating of the regulator (7 Adc), a resistor of sufficient wattage must be added in series with the field to bring the total resistance to 6 ohms.

POWER INPUT

Connect wiring as shown in Figure 5. Power for the regulator is derived from the generator auxiliary winding, connected to wires 3 and 4. The operable power input range is 220-260 Vac.

SENSING INPUTS

For sensing, wires U and V are connected to the generator phase U and phase V respectively. Wires X and Y are connected to the opposite ends of the U and V phase coils, or commoned together at the neutral (star) point.

QUADRATURE DROOP INPUT

When paralleling is required, a current transformer (CT) and variable burden resistor (rheostat) should be connected to terminals A and B. The ratio of the CT and the maximum value of the burden must be chosen so that at maximum current the voltage applied to terminals A and B does not exceed 5 Vac rms. A suitable value of burden would be a rheostat adjustable from 0 - 5 ohms (10 Watts) for a CT with a 1 Aac secondary current at full load. These terminals may either be linked or left open when paralleling is not required.

FUSES

It is recommended that a fuse or fuses with high interruption capability be installed per the interconnection diagram. A suitable fuse type would be Littlefuse (type 3AG), rated 250 Vac, 6.3 A, "50-Blo." Dimensions are 6.3 mm x 32 mm (1 1/2" x 1 1/4").

NOTE

Fuse(s) MUST be installed per the interconnection diagram to avoid interrupting field current directly.
