

of a wife. However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters. "My dear Mr. Bennet," said his daughter to him one day, "have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?" Mr. Bennet replied that he had not. "But it is," returned she; "for Mrs. Long has just been here, and she told me all about it." Mr. Bennet made no answer. "Do you not want to know who has taken it?" cried his wife impatiently. "You want to tell me, and I have no objection to hearing it." This was invitation enough. "Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs. Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young man of large fortune from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much delighted with it, that he agreed with Mr. Morris immediately. He is to take possession before the end of the week, and is to be married to a young lady of large fortune in a week. What do you think of that now? He is married or he will be!" "Oh! that single man, Mr. Bingley, is it?" "Oh! yes, it is that very man." "How so? How can it affect them?" "My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "it may affect you, too, if you do not make good use of it. If Mr. Bingley marries one of our daughters, he will never take another into his family; and the chance of seeing Mr. Bingley is so small, that you may as well consider the matter as closed. It is like seeing a fine picture, and not having it to look at again."
