Non-native Species and Their Role in the Environment Radu Cornel Guiaşu, 2016-08-01 The young field of invasion biology initially a branch of ecology and conservation biology has greatly expanded particularly in the last two and a half decades or so As a result the potential negative effects of introduced species have been widely advertised and sometimes perhaps overemphasized This book attempts to restore some balance to the current debate over the role of non native species by offering a broader perspective and taking a longer term evolutionary look at these species and their impact in their new environments The relatively arbitrary nature of terms such as native and non native and the rather inconsistent ways in which such terms are applied to biological species as well as the subjective boundaries of so called native ranges are analyzed The role of non native species in their new environments can be considerably more complex than the anti introduced species information would often suggest Thus the more positive and nuanced perspective on introduced species and their impact offered in this book is much needed and long overdue

Machine Learning for Ecology and Sustainable Natural Resource Management Grant Humphries, Dawn R. Magness, Falk Huettmann, 2018-11-05 Ecologists and natural resource managers are charged with making complex management decisions in the face of a rapidly changing environment resulting from climate change energy development urban sprawl invasive species and globalization Advances in Geographic Information System GIS technology digitization online data availability historic legacy datasets remote sensors and the ability to collect data on animal movements via satellite and GPS have given rise to large highly complex datasets These datasets could be utilized for making critical management decisions but are often messy and difficult to interpret Basic artificial intelligence algorithms i e machine learning are powerful tools that are shaping the world and must be taken advantage of in the life sciences In ecology machine learning algorithms are critical to helping resource managers synthesize information to better understand complex ecological systems Machine Learning has a wide variety of powerful applications with three general uses that are of particular interest to ecologists 1 data exploration to gain system knowledge and generate new hypotheses 2 predicting ecological patterns in space and time and 3 pattern recognition for ecological sampling Machine learning can be used to make predictive assessments even when relationships between variables are poorly understood When traditional techniques fail to capture the relationship between variables effective use of machine learning can unearth and capture previously unattainable insights into an ecosystem s complexity Currently many ecologists do not utilize machine learning as a part of the scientific process This volume highlights how machine learning techniques can complement the traditional methodologies currently applied in this field Reconciling Human Needs and Conserving Biodiversity: Large Landscapes as a New Conservation Paradigm Bila-Isia Inogwabini, 2020-02-18 Protected areas have often been defined as the backbones of biodiversity conservation Protected areas have often been defined as the backbones of biodiversity conservation However legitimate demands formulated by countries for their economic development growing human populations forest fragmentations and needs of local communities for sustainable livelihoods are also pressing demands on protected areas stringently pressuring conservation community to identify means to reconcile long term biodiversity conservation and communities livelihoods Hence integrating conservation activities within the global framework of economic development of countries with high biodiversity had become part of conservation paradigms Integrated development as a route to conservation strict protected areas community managed areas etc have been tried but resulted in debatable outcomes in many ways The lukewarm nature of these results brought landscape approach at the front of biodiversity conservation in Central Africa Since the late 1990s the landscape approach uses large areas with different functional attributes and shifts foundational biodiversity conservation paradigms Changes are brought to the role traditionally attributed to local communities aligning sustainable development with conservation and stretching conservation beyond the confines of traditional protected areas These three shifts need a holistic approach to respond to different conservation questions There are only a few instances where the landscape experience has been scientifically documented and lessons learnt drawn into a corpus of knowledge to guide future conservation initiatives across Central Africa To subjugate one biodiversity conservation landscape as one case study emerged as a matter of urgency to present the potential knowledge acquired throughout the landscape experiment including leadership and management processes tried results at least partially achieved and why such and such other process or management arrangement were

been chosen among many other alternatives etc The challenges of the implementation of the conservation landscape approach needed also to be documented This book responds to the majority of these questions drawing its content from the firsthand field knowledge it discusses these shifts and documents what has been tried how successful unsuccessful it was and what lessons learnt from these trials Theoretical questions such as threat index and ecological services etc are also discussed and gaps in knowledge are identified
