

The simplified hind leg

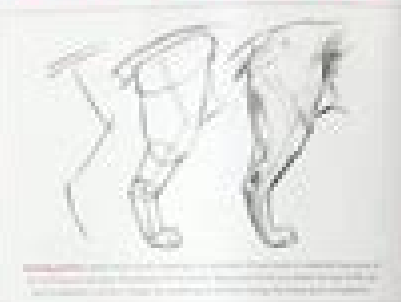

When you draw a hind leg, it's important to understand the basic structure of the bones and muscles. The hind leg is made up of the pelvis, femur, tibia, and fibula. The muscles are attached to these bones and are responsible for the movement of the leg.

The first step in drawing a hind leg is to establish the basic shape. You can do this by drawing a simple outline of the leg, showing the overall form and the position of the bones.

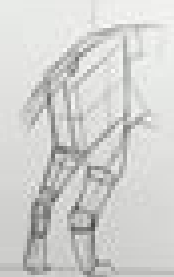

Next, you can add more detail to the drawing. This includes defining the muscles and the joints. You can use cross-hatching to create shadows and define the form of the muscles.

This diagram shows the basic structure of the hind leg, including the pelvis, femur, tibia, and fibula.

This series of sketches shows the hind leg in different poses, illustrating the basic structure and movement.

This sketch shows the hind leg in a running pose, illustrating the muscles and joints in more detail.
