Acts Of Meaning Four Lectures On Mind And Culture The Jerusalem Harvard Lectures:

Acts of Meaning Jerome Bruner, 1990 Bruner argues that the cognitive revolution with its fixation on a computational model of mind has led psychology away from the deeper objective of understanding mind as a creator of meanings Only by breaking out of the limitations of this model can we grasp the interaction through which mind both constitutes and is constituted by culture

Meaningful Stuff Jonathan Chapman, 2021-08-03 An argument for a design philosophy of better not more Never have we wanted owned and wasted so much stuff Our consumptive path through modern life leaves a wake of social and ecological destruction sneakers worn only once bicycles barely even ridden and forgotten smartphones languishing in drawers By what perverse alchemy do our newest coolest things so readily transform into meaningless junk In Meaningful Stuff Jonathan Chapman investigates why we throw away things that still work and shows how we can design products services and systems that last Obsolescence is an economically driven design decision a plan to hasten a product's functional or psychological undesirability Many electronic devices for example are intentionally impossible to dismantle for repair or recycling their brief use career proceeding inexorably to a landfill A sustainable design specialist who serves as a consultant to global businesses and governmental organizations Chapman calls for the decoupling of economic activity from mindless material consumption and shows how to do it Chapman shares his vision for an experience heavy material light design sensibility This vital and timely new design philosophy reveals how meaning emerges from designed encounters between people and things explores ways to increase the quality and longevity of our relationships with objects and the systems behind them and ultimately demonstrates why design can and must lead the transition to a sustainable future

The AfterGrief Hope Edelman, 2020 A validating new approach to the long term grieving process that explains why we feel stuck why that's normal and how shifting our perception of grief can help us grow from the New York Times bestselling author of

Motherless Daughters This is perhaps one of the most important books about grief ever written It finally dispels the myth that we are all supposed to get over the death of a loved one Claire Bidwell Smith author of Anxiety The Missing Stage of Grief Aren't you over it yet Anyone who has experienced a major loss in their past knows this question We've spent years fielding versions of it both explicit and implied from family colleagues acquaintances and friends We recognize the subtle cues the slight eyebrow lift the soft startled Oh That long ago from those who wonder how an event so far in the past can still occupy so much precious mental and emotional real estate Because of the common but false assumption that grief should be time limited too many of us believe we're grieving wrong when sadness suddenly resurges sometimes months or even years after a loss The AfterGrief explains that the death of a loved one isn't something most of us get over get past put down or move beyond Grief is not an emotion to pass through on the way to feeling better Instead grief is in constant motion it is tidal easily and often reactivated by memories and sensory events and is re-triggered as we experience life transitions anniversaries and other losses Whether we want it to or not grief gets folded into our developing identities where it informs our thoughts hopes expectations behaviors and fears and we inevitably carry it forward into everything that follows Drawing on her own encounters with the ripple effects of early loss as well as on interviews with dozens of researchers therapists and regular people who've been bereaved New York Times bestselling author Hope Edelman offers profound advice for reassessing loss and adjusting the stories we tell ourselves about its impact on our identities With guidance for reframing a story of loss finding equilibrium within it and even experiencing renewed growth and purpose in its wake she demonstrates that though grief is a lifelong process it doesn't have to be a lifelong struggle

Trauma and Resilience Among Displaced Populations

Gail Theisen-Womersley,2021-03-19 This open access book provides an enriched understanding of historical collective cultural and identity related trauma emphasising the social and political location of human subjects It therefore presents a socio-ecological perspective on trauma rather than viewing displaced individuals as traumatised passive victims The vastness of the phenomenon of trauma among displaced populations has led it to become a critical and timely area of inquiry and this book is an important addition to the literature. It gives an overview of theoretical frameworks related to trauma and migration, exploring factors of risk and resilience, prevalence rates of PTSD, and conceptualisations of trauma beyond psychiatric diagnoses. It conceptualises experiences of trauma from a sociocultural perspective, including collective trauma, collective aspirations, and collective resilience, and provides applications for professionals working with displaced populations in complex institutional, legal, and humanitarian settings. It includes case studies based on the author's own 10-year experience working in emergency contexts with displaced populations in 11 countries across the world. This book presents unique data collected by the author herself, including interviews with survivors of ISIS attacks, with an asylum seeker in Switzerland who set himself alight in protest against asylum procedures, and women from the Murle tribe affected by the conflict in South Sudan who experienced an episode of mass fainting spells. This is an important resource for academics and professionals working in the field of trauma studies and with traumatised groups and individuals.

Creating Consilience Edward Slingerland, Mark Collard, 2012-01-19

Calls for a consilient or vertically integrated approach to the study of human mind and culture have for the most part been received by scholars in the humanities with either indifference or hostility. One reason for this is that consilience has often been framed as bringing the study of humanistic issues into line with the study of non-human phenomena rather than as something to which humanists and scientists contribute equally. The other major reason that consilience has yet to catch on in the humanities is a dearth of compelling examples of the benefits of adopting a consilient approach. Creating Consilience is the product of a workshop that brought together internationally renowned scholars from a variety of fields to address both of these issues. It includes representative pieces from workshop speakers and participants that examine how adopting such a consilient stance, informed by cognitive science and grounded in evolutionary theory, would concretely impact specific topics in the humanities, examining each topic in a manner that not only cuts across the humanities/natural science divide but also across individual humanistic disciplines. By taking seriously the fact that science/humanities integration is a two-way exchange, this volume takes a new approach to bridging the cultures of science and the humanities. The editors and contributors formulate how to develop a new shared framework of consilience beyond mere interdisciplinarity in a way that both sides can accept.

Designing for Learning in a Networked World Nina Bonderup Dohn, 2018-02-28

Designing for Learning in a Networked World provides answers to the following questions: what skills are required for living in a networked world? how can educators design for learning these skills? and what role can and should networked learning play in a networked world? It discusses central theoretical concepts and draws on current debates about competences necessary to thrive in contemporary society. The book presents detailed analyses of skills needed and investigates the question of how one can design for learning in specific empirical cases ranging in academic level from preschool to university teaching. The book clarifies the different conceptions of design within the educational field and offers a framework for thinking critically about instances of networked learning It analyses digital and Computational Literacy and discusses participatory skills for learning in a networked world Examples of specific empirical cases include teaching programming to students not necessarily intrinsically motivated to learn facilitation of a participatory public in the library and designs for children s transition from day care to primary school discussed as a matter of networked contexts Engaging thoughtfully with the question of 21st century skills this book will be vital reading to scholars researchers and students within the fields of education networked learning learning technology and the learning sciences digital literacy design for learning and library studies A Design Approach to Research in Technology Enhanced Mathematics Education ,2010 A Thesis Submitted for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy Institute of Education University of London
