

Second year tree management

Quickly fill their allotted spaces

During the second year, the trees will fill their allotted spaces on the trellis.

Mark a few beds if you want to create more trellises on the beds.

Trim the branches and side shoots of the top half of the trellis and the trees in the rows. Remove any shoots growing inside the 'V' and allow the lower side shoots and the tree to grow.

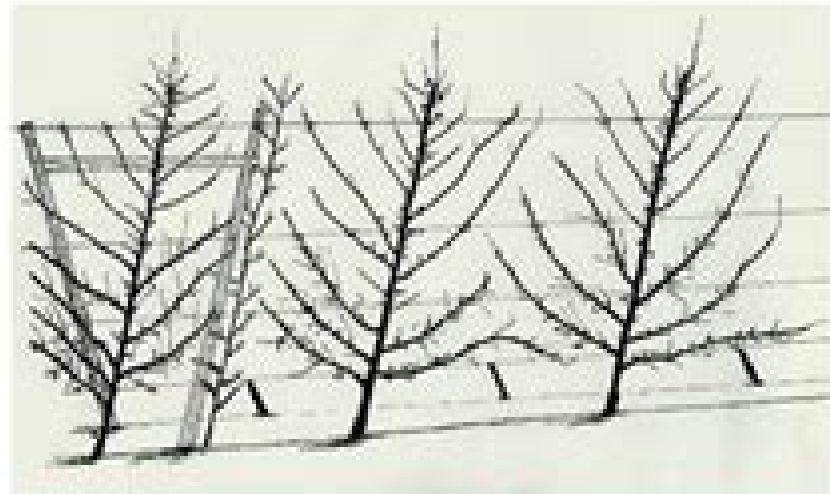

Do not feed the trellis.

At the end of the season you have more open, bushier trees. The top have continued to grow to follow with the roots and do not need pruning or water.

The best way to control these two regions and achieve optimum production is:

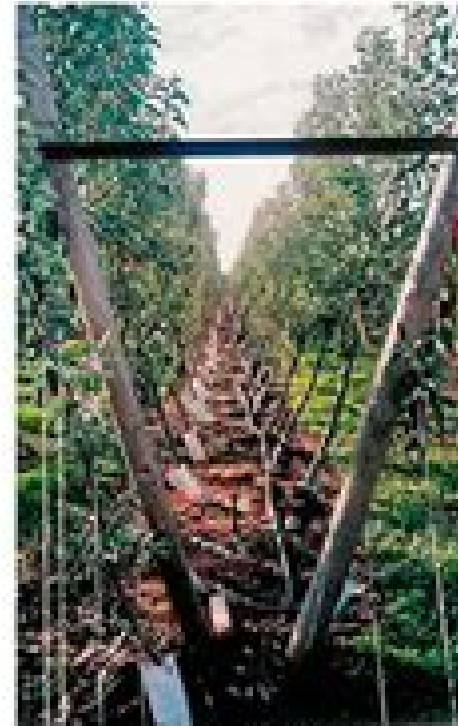

- To produce primary year young trees as soon as is possible, and
- Only lead the trees to late spring when they have reached a height of 10% of the width of the rows. In this to avoid some over shading.
For example, if the rows from tree to tree (between the rows) are 4.5 m wide (see last page 12), the height of the tree canopy in summer should be 0.45 m, measured vertically.
- Crop your trees according to their size and region. As a guide, a ton of sustainable yields for high density apple orchards in Australia is here (page 17).

Depending on region, your trees may be able to produce an average of 20 apples per tree (2.0 kg). However, if you happened to have planted small trees, the heavily managed to keep good trellis branches you must remove all that to encourage good growth in the second year.

After two years in the orchard, your trees have filled their spaces on the trellis. The bottom half of the trees have opened up and some gaps have also developed along the trellis. The pollinator trees are also larger in their spaces. Only one side of the trellised row is shown.

These Granny Smith trees on A20218 produced 15 kg of fruit 12 months after the trees were planted.
