

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their ends. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the subject matter.

Mixing and comparing colours

The perception of light makes colours visible. Light travels in waves of different lengths, and the same level of transparency of different wavelengths gives different colours. The range of wavelengths perceived can be called the visible spectrum – the shortest visible wavelength is violet, and the longest is red. Artists can gain insight from scientific principles that describe some wavelengths and effect others. Color of colours is fundamental work. The colours in a painting are usually the colours of reflected light.

The colour wheel

Primary, secondary and tertiary colors are represented by 120-degree gaps between adjacent colors. The color wheel is a circular diagram that shows the relationships between colors. It is a tool used by artists to understand the color spectrum and how colors interact. The wheel is divided into three main sections: primary colors (red, yellow, blue), secondary colors (orange, green, purple), and tertiary colors (brown, pink, grey). The wheel also shows the relationships between colors, such as complementary colors (opposite each other) and analogous colors (adjacent to each other).

Primary and secondary

Primary colors are the colors that cannot be created by mixing other colors. Secondary colors are created by mixing two primary colors. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors. The primary colors are red, yellow, and blue. The secondary colors are orange, green, and purple. The tertiary colors are brown, pink, and grey.

More colour mixtures

More color mixtures are shown in the diagram. The primary colors are red, yellow, and blue. The secondary colors are orange, green, and purple. The tertiary colors are brown, pink, and grey. The diagram shows how these colors are created by mixing the primary and secondary colors.

Warm and cool

Colors are also divided into warm and cool colors. Warm colors are red, orange, and yellow. Cool colors are blue, green, and purple. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors. The warm colors are at the top, and the cool colors are at the bottom.

Complementary

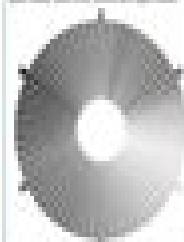

Complementary colors are colors that are opposite each other on the color wheel. They are red and green, yellow and purple, and blue and orange. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors. The complementary colors are at opposite ends of the wheel.

Tone

Tone refers to the lightness or darkness of a color. It is created by adding white or black to a color. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors. The tones are at the center of the wheel.
